| 1 | Not sure how this activity related directly to the workgroups. I wish we had gone around to the four areas and discussed it in small groups, as we had done earlier. | 6/10/2016 10:50 AM |
| 2 | Identifying hows this work fits into the broader early childhood world is critical, but just throwing a bunch of initiatives up on a wall was not an effective way to have this discussion. | 6/9/2016 11:58 AM |
| 3 | I didn't completely understand how this activity fit with the objectives for the day. It seemed as if the majority of the folks in the room were aware of resources on most levels. The activity felt a bit forced. | 6/8/2016 6:02 PM |
| 4 | I think it could have been better with more direction or maybe facilitated differently like for example work in pairs and list the resources you know of that contribute to CSPD, vs putting it in buckets (e.g., state, regional, local) and then the pairs would share. This activity did not relate well to the SWOT process (or was not communicated that way). Did you really want strengths (which is what was directed or list the resources (organizations, initiatives, etc) that contribute? | 6/8/2016 4:48 PM |

| 1 | The length of the day really should align with the work - but, for strategic planning I usually like to really dig in and having a full day is good for that. | 6/9/2016 11:43 AM |
| 2 | If the workgroups are efficient and effective with development of the plan, it could mean there is less for the strategic planning team to do at future meetings. Full day helps if there are areas of CSPD that the team members would need to build their knowledge about before moving towards a decision or input on something, which is how it was structured this first time. | 6/8/2016 4:57 PM |
